

Real vs. Fake News Quiz

"How news savvy are you? Can you spot the B.S.?"

Our website is designed to quiz users on how up to date they are with current events and also how naïve/gullible they are. Users will have a series of 10 questions to answer where some of those questions will be real news stories and other questions will be fake new stories. Users will only have 20 seconds per question to answer. If the timer runs out, that question will be marked incorrect.

When the user enters the website, a screen will prompt asking the user for their name, age, and location. After the user enters this information, they will be prompted to start the quiz.

We will be using 2 API's—we are still deciding on the API's from either NY Times, CNN, Embed.ly, Associated Press, etc.

Project Bonuses:

- On the mobile version, users will be able to swipe left if they believe that a story is false or they can swipe right if they believe that the story is true.
- Map where the user is and based on where the user is, we can draft statistics on how News Savvy a particular area is.
- Create a social media channel and invite friends to take the quiz.
